“New Views VII”

LITERARY BURLINGTON COUNTY Writers, Historic Libraries, and Literary Forums

May 7 - May 30, 2008

Burlington County’s role in the history of America takes many forms. The pre-colonial role of the Lenni-Lenape, the Quaker influence on the colonization and social evolution of the county, and the impact on the American Revolution both as a haven for patriots and a diversionary battlefield are legend. Not to mention the county’s place as a leader in transportation, commerce, agriculture and industry! But how many are aware of the literary talents and contributions of Burlington County residents over the centuries? This year’s New Views will focus on several historic local libraries and literary forums and some of the lesser known literati of Burlington County.

There are dozens of individuals and places in the annals of Burlington County whose contributions to the fields of poetry, literature, history and journalism deserve recognition and acclaim. To that end, we invite artists to memorialize the places associated with these writers and institutions through the visual arts. Historical notes, location and directions to the site can be accessed at www.BurlCoHistorian.com. If you do not have web access please call 609-265-5068.
